Hongyu Wang’s research includes cross-cultural life histories and thought, autobiography and curriculum, post-structural and Asian philosophies. Her recent work reflects nonviolence approach and international studies.

She has written extensively in curriculum studies and multicultural education, engaging East and West dialogue and working with/through differences and conjunctions of the thoughts of Foucault, Kristeva, Derrida, Confucius, Lao Tzu, Zhuangzi and many others.

Hongyu Wang is a professor in curriculum studies at Oklahoma State University. Her previous education includes an M.A. in comparative curriculum and instructional theory from East China Normal University and a Ph.D in curriculum theory at Louisiana State University.

She co-founded a Special Interest Group in Confucianism, Taoism, and Education at the American Educational Research Association and has authored and edited numerous books in curriculum studies and cross-cultural dialogues.

She was the former editor of Journal of Curriculum Theorizing.